Does General Buckner Represent Sentiment Among Old Confederates?

Having been very consistently a supporter of Republican platforms and Republican candidates since 1896, or perhaps, since he left the Executive office at Frankfort in 1891, which was the last year in which he drew pay from the State of Kentucky as a Democratic official of the Commonwealth, Gen. S. B. Buckner, of Hart county, last week addressed to the public his eleventh annual letter giving his reasons for not this year giving his support (his one vote), to the public which so signally honored him during his active life and down to the days of old age. One not informed as to the political record of Gen. Buckner might imagine from the general tone of his communication of this year that he was just at the parting of the ways with the Democratic party, and that he was just preparing to withdraw from its support, taking with him an imaginary host of old Confederate soldiers, men who had stood by the party in its darkest hours in Kentucky and the Southland, and that it was painful for him to part but that his conscience and his duty to his State impelled him to do so, and to take the step at this particular time. As said, one unacquainted with Gen. Buckner's record might reach this conclusion, but there are few men of intelligence in Kentucky who do not know something of his record, and that this simulating Democracy upon his part is but a Republican mask and a cloak under which he thinks he can do the better work among the most faithful class of Kentuckians, the soldiers of the Lost Cause. Annually, whenever he thinks he can serve the Republican cause, he breaks out in an open letter to the people with whom he has not come in personal contact for a dozen or more years, and only

A Growing Institution.

Already the largest business school in the South, the Bowling Green Business University, is still growing. It is now enjoying the largest September attendance in its history. It has made good all its promises and pledges. Its graduates secure positions and hold them with credit to themselves and satisfaction to their employers. It advertises nothing it does not fulfill. In this way it has justly become the largest business school in the South.

For information, address Bowling Green Business University, Bowling Green, Kentucky.

CARE OF TABLE LINEN.

Here is Truly Where a "Stitch in Time" Does Wonders.

Too little attention is paid to the wear and tear on tablecloths and napkins as a rule. They are washed and ironed and put away, regardless of the places that are becoming thin and worn until these spots become holes and it suddenly dawns on the dismayed housekeeper that her table linen is "going all to pieces."

If tiny holes are found in table linen the first thing to do is to darn them neatly, selecting the numbers of thread or cotton best suited to the material to be darned, using as fine a needle as possible. If the material is much worn it is best to lay a piece of the same under the thin place and darn down upon it. This gives strength, though it does not look quite as neat as it would without the extra piece of material beneath. A ragged tear always must have an extra piece beneath.
